THE 1968 MANOR

PAUL J. GREELEY     Editor-in-Chief
JOHN W. O'KEEFE     Assistant Editor
PAUL D. BUEKER     Business Manager

Box A    Fairfield University    Fairfield, Connecticut 06430    •    203 259-2453

A new era of growth began at this University four years ago. Over these years the Class of 1968 has participated in the creation of the unique tradition that is, and will continue to become, Fairfield.

During this period of rapid development the Class has travelled in the wake of a man who initiated interest, enthusiasm and growth at Fairfield University.

The Class of 1968 has been closely associated with this man. We arrived here together and together we have seen the same dynamic evolution of this University. Sometimes this vision was seen from opposite vantage points. It was, however, always seen for the mutual benefit and growth of this institution.

For his interest in the Class of 1968, for his constant devotion to Fairfield University and for his contribution to the growth of our University, we, the editors and staff of the 1968 MANOR dedicate the 1968 MANOR to the President of Fairfield University.

The introduction to

When the moving vans left,
five hundred new recruits, two gold fish, and what a mixer is.

Fairfield University began with a handshake, sixteen empty forms to complete, beds to make,
red and white beanies.

Fairfield's Campus had seven sets of drums,
a week to find out

Most of the freshmen were a little wet behind the ears

The Junior Class showed

it was a long way to the top

In early evenings dust swirls-

Visible
only in lamp light,

Thoughts
like dust,

Glance off
shiny, hard,
wood

Broken only by a slamming card catalogue

Only
for a split second

Thoughts
like dust, are alive only in the light of reflection.

Discussion and reflection

fade slowly, painfully,
into a sheltered mind.

"Telling it like it is"
is life shaded in half-passion.

For some peace shouted

silently,

For others silence

was an abandonment and a loss

homecoming

Women are mysterious animals,

teasingly beautiful, fun to be with, but tough to tame.

 Up

Progress is seeing the world rebuilding brotherhood through the joy of sweat.

A spark of life
from a splintering sun spins around and down

in a collage of color

Broken by chaos - healed with love.

A circus shadowed in dialects

of bright sights,

loud sounds

and sad clowns.

Walking,

I had a dream that winter had caged autumn,

when I awoke I retreated like a rat

of books

Together
we learned while windows were closed.

The Beach Boys

Fairfield's "Ambassadors of Song" under the direction of Mr. Simon Harak performed with the American Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Mr. Andrew Heath, at Carnegie Hall.

Time        slowly,
      slips        quickly,

      then not at all.

The mind tells tales never heard before.

We resisted stagnation through discussion and song.

Alone,
we focus on a still moment.

Alone.

We are ourselves

For the benefit of the University community
the President's Academy, Student Government, WVOF and the STAG contributed to the progress of the student body.

We lived the good life

from September till late January,

then we hoped that it was not too late.

We came,
we saw,

and we could not believe that exams were here again.

Education,

as life,

has to be tested

to be proved.

A post exam depression was ended by a Mardi Gras fever.

During Mardi Gras

no drum rumbled quietly-
No guitar sang softly-

As Mitch Ryder performed
through microphones, people watched.

"Do the best you can...

A man would do nothing that no one would find fault with what he has done."

Cardinal Newman.

At Fairfield

no man became an island unto himself.

Personal commitments and interests were always pursued with the gusto necessary for completion.

There is a time to give and a time to receive.

Creation, innovation, and spontaneous improvisation are necessary for growth

we will be able to speed up that day

when all God's children-

"When we allow freedom to ring,
when we let it ring
from every village and hamlet,
from every state and city,

Blackmen and Whitemen, Jews and Gentiles, Catholics and Protestants - will be able to join hands and to sing the words 'Free at last, free at last, thank God almighty, free at last.' "

Dr. Martin Luther King.

Ten yards is a long way

when you travel

When the team could not make it

but we won.

THE HISTORY OF THE CLASS OF 1968
IN FOUR ACTS

ACT I
Scene I

Time: Sept. 13, 1964

Place: Fairfield University, Fairfield, Conn.

Stage Right: 417 bewildered, confused boys meander on stage eyes wide open—watching the Juniors. (The stage is set; the actors are amateurs and are strangers they are preparing for Godknowswhat.)

LIGHTS! CURTAIN! ACTION!

JUNIOR: Okay, boys, here they are—take the luggage, park the cars, have 'em meet Father, show them their rooms and give them a tour of the campus!

FROSH: Hi there, say what's the story on teachers here? They rough? What kind of football team you got? What about classes—a lot of reading, huh? Where's the gym? We have any curfews? What about drinking? That Dean of Men is he tough? What are we going to be doing this week? Oh yeh, bye Mom, bye Dad, sure I'll be all right. Right, I'll call tomorrow and let you know. What's this, three in one of these rooms! THREE IN A ROOM!!!

NARRATOR: What you have just heard is something akin to the way the conversations ran that first week for the Class of 1968. The Juniors were friendly and helpful; the Freshmen, curious and apprehensive. This Orientation Week was the first time that the entire class would be together. The day-hops, the off-campus boarders and dorm students spent ten days of initiation, bull sessions and registration lines that went forever. The Juniors had so organized the week that the time was divided into several key areas—academics, social, athletic and religious. Those days started our growth and maturity as college men. It was a theme we would not soon forget, if ever.

Look over there. On the right we have the Sophomore Class and on the left the Freshmen. This was the finale of Orientation Week—a field day concluded by a tug-o-war. The Sophomores won, of course, but many on both sides ended up treading water. It was like a ritual, almost a tradition, for Freshmen. You see, that was like a new baptism. A baptism into a new world, a new life which would be more real, more meaningful than anything we had known before.

Scene II

Place: Canisius Hall, Xavier Hall, Campion Bookstore

Frosh: How do you find out where your classroom is? What does this series of numbers mean—30320? 10101? He can't really expect us to read all of this, can he? This is worse than the summer reading list.

2nd Frosh: Hey, look at this. Only eighteen hours of class a week. That's great! On Fridays, I'm out at one o'clock. What more can you ask for?

Narrator: What more indeed! By the way, look over to the left. That's right, Campion Bookstore, situated in a lovely little closet. Notice how the lines of Freshmen buying books weaves by Mrs. Brown's mailroom, then down by the T.V.

room and into the laundry room. Here is one fellow finally placing his order.

Frosh: I'd like one copy of "Various Readings", please.

Narrator: And now coming on stage over here are some of the other new faces around Fairfield. (Enter Fr. William C. McInnes, S.J.)

Fr. McInnes: (Stopping for a press conference as he assumes the Presidency of the University). The biggest difficulty Fairfield will experience is its lack of space. (He walks to the back of the stage and breaks ground for a new dorm—Regis Hall.)

Nar: And here is the new Dean of Resident Students, Fr. George Gallarelli, S.J. How are you, Father?

Fr.: Just fine thanks. I just found out that this class is the biggest and best in Fairfield's young history.

Nar: That's right. Every new class is the finest these days. By the way, what do you feel will be your biggest problem this year?

Fr.: Being respected.

Nar: And here is Father Henry Murphy, S.J., the man responsible for admitting this class. What do you think about this class, Father?

Fr.: Hi, how goes it?

Nar: Thank you, Father.

Scene III

Place: The Back Gym

Nar: In the great conflict known as Adapting-to-College this floor on which I now stand was once a prime battlefield. This innocent floor, usually accustomed to the patter of sneakers and the thuds of basketballs, situated beneath an architectural marvel rivaled only by Pantry Pride Supermarket, was subjected on any given Friday or Saturday night to a peculiar ritual, quite mysterious in its workings and even more bizarre in its effects known as a Mixer. The mixer would commence usually around Wednesday or Thursday when the club sponsoring it would attempt to woo the Freshmen to stay at school and buy a ticket to the mixer. Signs would read, "20 buses coming from Schools all over the East". It was odd but by Friday afternoon all but two or three had cancelled due to some unforeseen event. (Probably a mixer at Yale). Advance tickets were sold in Loyola Cafe. Finally the big night came. As the buses from Marymount, Manhattanville, College of New Rochelle or Albertus Magnus pulled up, the Stags would form two lines as the girls disembarked and quickly sprinted into the gym. It was something similar to a cattle chute. If the market looked good, the tickets would be sold and the mixer would be a success. But inside there were not only college girls. Words like 'townie' began to make their way into our vocabulary. That band you see there, turning up its amplifiers, is called the Bleach Boys and they are pretty popular this year.

1st Stag: This sure is a lousy mixer, How can anyone meet someone with all this noise and distraction!

2nd Stag: This is really poor. The girls are ugly. Heck they're only interested in someone who can dance well and make all this stupid small talk. This is really poor. What are you doing next week.

1st Stag: Probably go to the mixer, but this time . . . wait a minute, say i'll see you later. She's kinda cute . . .

Frosh: Would you like to dance?

She: No, thanks. i just ote and I don't want to get cramps.

Frosh: Well, would you like to see some of the campus.

She: All right. i've never seen Fairfield before. You really have a beautiful campus.

He: It's even nicer in the doyttime (when you can see something.)

(The night progresses, sometimes at the Japanese gardens, or behind the gym or ot the pond. But finally she has to go back to the bus).

Frosh: Say, would you like to go out next weekend?

She: Well . . . you see i've really enjoyed tonight but I have a boyfriend back home . . . and well . . . before I left we had this long talk . . . and . . . But here's my phone number. Why don't you call sometime.

Frosh: Will Do.

Nor: Notice how this man walks. He's going back to Loyolo Cafe to tell his friends of his success.

Frosh: Hey that mixer was tough, really cool. Met a real nice girl.

2nd Frosh: Gonna see her ogoin.

1st: Sure, she's wild about me.

2nd: Say how about setting me up with one of her friends.

1st: Sure, sure. Say, I was just thinking. Did you see any upperclassmen there?

2nd: No, come to think of it. Maybe they just don't like girls.

1st: Maybe they got something better to do? Can't understand it. Well, I'm going to rack out and dry out my sport coat. All this sweat.

Scene IV

Ploce: Canisius and Xavier Holls

Nar: The classrooms were another challenge the Closs of '68 had to face that year. Coming from high school, most of us were not used to the classes, the reading, the tests. The professors gradually broke us into the routine. Nearly everyone had six courses: Philosophy, Theology, History, English, Language and Math. New Worlds started opening up to us that we had never been aware of before. Unexplainably we began to think.

1st Frosh: Hey man, I don't believe oll this work. What are they trying to do to us? i've got five books to read this week, two papers and three tests.

2nd Frosh: Yeah, but you don't have Petry and all that stuff to read in the library.

3rd Frosh: Either of you guys want to study BHC for Davis every Thursday night.

1st: The thing is they don't give you enough time to do it all. We should have every other week off. And then finish finals first week in May.

2nd: That seems like a good program.

Nor: As you see already, the class has assumed a somewhat critical attitude, not particularly peculiar to Fairfield alone. But it went a little deeper than just complaints due to frustration and tension. For the Class of '68 began to realize that it was a quarter of the population of the school ond that by graduating from this school we would always be linked to it. Genuine concern and involvement began to surface as true marks of the class.

Some things just had to change and we could not wait. Almost systematically we began to influence the University and each other. At times the cry '68 IS GREAT' went up, at first it was hollow pride but then it began to mean something. involvement became the watchword.

1st Frosh: Hey, who won the closs elections?

2nd: Johnson's President, Vin Wolsh, V.P., Sol Crenshaw's secretary ond John Walsh is Treasurer.

1st: Not bad. Hey, you going to Fother and Son Weekend?

2nd: Sure. It'll give Dad a chance to get away for a weekend ond tell me how similor it is to when he went to college. Besides, I'll need money for Winter Cornivol.

1st: Who's Maynard Ferguson and Morgono King, anyway?

2nd: Don't know. My dote wants to see the "Fantasticks" But I'll teach her—she's staying in Loyolo.

Nor: That Winter Carnival he mentioned was our first so- ciol weekend. it must be left up to you whether the fact thot it also lost over $3,000.00 is significant or not. Groduol- ly, the long, bleak winter dissolves into worm spring. We hod our shore of pranks thot spring. Three freshmen were suspended for setting off firecrackers and a certain priest was hung in effigy. Also one night some students stole into the library ond put out on the shelves books thot were listed on the index which were kept in a separate compartment. University authorities, when the story was released to the newspapers, cited 'spring fever' as its cause. The passing of spring ond the abolition of the index resolved this crisis.

Freshmen year went out not with o whimper but with a bang. A bang set off by Fr. Mcinnes and Dave Bannon, the recently elected Student Gov't. President. The occasion was the ground breaking for the long-awoited Campus Center. Not content with the old shovel routing, it was decided to use a charge of dynamite. As the plunger went down an impressive explosion went off and a column of dirt and rocks went streaking skyword.

Quickly freshman year drew to a close. In eight doys we hod six final exoms. We learned quite a bit about ourselves ond about our school. But it was only the beginning.

ACT II

Scene i

Nar: The Summer vocation was now over. it hod held jobs and sandy beaches for the stags. But we returned to greet the new Freshmon Class, the Class of '69, with another field day and another tug-o-war in which a few more were bap- tized. Having a new class a year behind us was a good feeling. It helped our ego by giving us an orea of expertise that we could not demonstrote before. Now we were pros, old hands at the college game. Many who had to live off campus freshman year were now on campus either in Gon- zaga or Campion. New faces. New friends. And new leaders. Lou Peddicord was president of the closs, Carl Chadburn, Vice-President, John Tabellione, Secretary and Doug Johnson, Treasurer. We felt we were fairly knowledgeable about the why's and wherefore's of the University. We were told we were rebellious, radical and sophomoric (what else can sophomores be?) But we did not give up on the school. We realized that it could be bettered and that we were the ones to do it. We found something infringing on our individualism, self-expression and growth.

Fr. McInnes: (at the first meeting of the President's Academy) Students should think about the challenge of the Campus, both big and small.

Nar: The class was doing some thinking about the challenges both big and small and decided to do something about them to.

Scene II

Nar: A lot of thought and discussion that year went into the challenges, both big and small. To provide a forum for this and class news, the Sophomore Class inaugurated a newspaper of critical commentary, sometimes positive, sometimes negative. Its frequency of publication was implied by its name "Whenever Possible." The editors—Lou Peddicord, Vin Walsh and Roy Rhodes also found the Dear Grace column in the STAG a useful forum for vigorous discussion.

As the crisis at St. John's University in New York swelled and achieved national prominence, the class started to think about one of the bigger challenges—namely the nature of Catholic education. A lot of thought was spent on this topic. To clarify the issue the Class sponsored a symposium, The Possibility of Catholic Education with Drs. Lauer and McBrien from St. John's and Fr. Coughlin, S.J., Dr. Matthew McCarthy and Mr. Walter Petry from Fairfield. No conclusions were reached but we were pleasantly surprised to hear that the professors here felt no infringement on their academic freedom.

1965 and 1966 were important years for our country in South East Asia as the Vietnam conflict escalated and more U.S. troops were involved. Early in Sophomore year 900 students had signed a petition reaffirming the government's policy in Vietnam and a drive to send Christmas presents to the men serving there was very successful. There was a Vietnam rally sponsored by the Public Relations Forum featuring history profs from UB and Fairfield. The Sophomore Class felt that both sides should be represented and so Fairfield Alumnus, Tom Cornell, a pacifist and a draft-card burner, gave a talk and conducted an informal discussion which gave an added insight into the growing peace and resistance movement.

The year was progressing well with the regular routine of classes, books, papers and in the second semester we had another social weekend, Mardi Gras, featuring the Four Seasons.

Then suddenly on Tuesday, Feb. 15, 1966 the radio news stunned the Fairfield campus. Patrick Burke, a senior and co-captain of the basketball team was found dead. Quietly we reacted in disbelief and astonishment. Without knowing quite why we went to the chapel. It seemed to be the only thing to do. At four o'clock, Fr. Nickerson said Mass. Few there will soon forget the other members of the basketball team and their coach lining the left wall of the crowded chapel, few will forget the cohesion that this tragedy brought to our class and to our school, few will forget seeing friends of Pat and even those who did not know him personally, break and cry. The noisy Loyola Cafe was unusually quiet, as was the campus that whole night and following days as many went to his wake and the special Mass Thursday at school and the funeral Friday in Hartford. We began to realize not just the cruelty of death but the feeling of solidarity that we shared without sorrow.

Academically, sophomore year was a year of decision. The time has come to choose our majors. Of course this presented many problems for some students. A few would become members of the select Major-of-the-Month Club.

1st Soph: Why did I major in English? Well, you see in high school I was really good in math. So I thought I'd become a math major but I didn't catch all the calculus stuff. So then the next best thing was accounting but I don't handle much money anyway and I was overdrawn in my check book last month and my old man hit the ceiling. So the next thing was to go into some science but I was talking to this guy down at the Duchess the other night, he said that science and technology had not really made much of a difference in peoples' lives anyway. So why pick a loser. Then I thought I'd go into Sociology because I really like people and I make out pretty well at mixers you know. But I couldn't find any faculty member in sociology to talk to. Next I wanted to go into history, but with all that reading, no sir. And besides my own history isn't so hot—I had an uncle hung in effigy once, Effigy, Ohio. Someone told me that you got good books to read in English and I'll probably be on a corridor with that Jesuit English teacher next year, you know who I mean. And besides I can talk and read pretty well so how hard can it be? Do you think I'll like it? Heck, do I breathe?!

Nar: 1966 was THE YEAR for basketball at Fairfield. The team included Seniors Mike Branch and Pat Burke, Juniors Jim Brown, Charlie Phillips, Bill Pritz and Bill Boyd, and our own Sophs Art Kenny, Bill Jones, Sol Crenshaw, Larry Cirina, Ted Sotinsky, Bill McCann, Stan Kobierowski and Pete Gillen. This team racked up a 19-5 season against the best teams in the East. The final game of the season was against the University of Bridgeport in our own gym. That night the gym record for most points scored by our team was broken. The final score was 111-60. At the final buzzer the Stag fans rushed on to the court and lifted Mike Branch on their shoulders to cut down the nets, one of which he gave to his father. For almost a month the campus was alive with talk of the bid to the National Invitational Tournament in Madison Square Garden. There was no doubt in anyone's mind that the team had deserved this honor and that finally they would receive the recognition that had been for so long denied us. It was not written for Fairfield to attain this award this year. The frustration that the lack of the bid caused in the whole community would be impossible to describe. The memory of this disappointment was pushed to the back of our minds by the Student Government's success in obtaining 'open house'. Spring once more came to Fairfield. In our ritual, we celebrated the blooming of the Dogwoods with a boat cruise on Long Island Sound, Carolyn Hester at a prom, and the great Ray Charles and his band in concert. Sophomore year saw the class put forth its ambition to change the school, it saw our loyalty to our class and it saw the growth of our knowledge academically and socially. We were now ready to take up responsible positions in the University at large. It could be seen by all that the phrase "68 is Great" was taking on meaning.

ACT III

Scene I

Place: The hill above Bellarmine Pond.

Nor: "Junior year started off with the repayment of a debt. It was a debt incurred two years ago in our Freshman Orientation. It was now our turn to thank those Juniors who ran our Orientation by doing the same thing for the Class of 1970. The majority of the class was organized over the summer by Co-Chairmen Paul Greeley and Brian Burke. Assignments covering registration, sports, the retreat, Stag night, the field day, the bull sessions, the mixers were given out and fulfilled. There was our final Tug-o-war. The Juniors were outnumbered better than 2 to 1 and even Brocchini's jeep could not help us that day. (Juniors and freshmen tread water, chase each other, fall down laughing.) And so the tradition is continued. It is probably our best tradition.

As this is going on the second Leadership Conference is being conducted in Ridgefield, Conn. by Fr. McInnes. This conference was an attempt to further communication between the administration and the student leaders, especially pinpointing problem areas for the coming years. Both of these activities point out the new role that the Junior class assumed. The year 1966-1967 was to be our year, the most exciting, productive and responsible year we would enjoy. As Freshmen we were still in the high school mentality; as sophomores we were concerned with our own problems, with the school, our friends, our girls, we were confused, neither a high school kid nor a full college man. But Junior year, ah Junior year—the school was ours, our friends were made, we felt older and ready to run the place. The change in attitude was shown by our social behavior. Our contact with girls in our first year centered around the mixers and the bars during those famous drinking bouts. Sophomore year was the year you had those 'great' blind dates and tried to have a date with a girl you met the year before. In Junior year it was noticed that some guys were dating one girl more than others, that some guys were getting pretty serious about their girls. The mysterious spectrum of Marriage loomed just over the horizon. That was enough to scare many a Stag.

1st: "Hey, what do you think of the Campus Center?"

2nd: "Oh I think it's a good thing to have but what we really need now is a field house."

1st: "You don't have any comments on the dining room compared to what we had in Loyola, or the new bookstore, game room, mail room, lounges, fireplace, meeting rooms and the snack bar?"

2nd: "Where's all that?"

1st: "Think of all that can be done there—the shows, concerts, lectures all that kind of stuff."

2nd: "Yah, but we really need a field house."

1st: "For the return of Stan Poole?" "Did you know that they renovated the chapel?"

2nd: "That really burns me. They never do anything for the student."

1st: "Well I'll see you later, I'm going to the ground breaking for the new dorm."

2nd: "Image, Image, Image—that's all that they think of around here."

Scene II

Nar: One thing that is said about the value of a small college is that one has more ability to be creative and do things on his own. That statement came true for several students on Oct. 7, 1966 in the Mount Vernon Stadium. For two years a group of dedicated students were involved in bringing a new activity to Fairfield. They ran raffles, showed a Floss Gordon film festival, sold Christmas gifts, pleaded before the Student Government for funds, dealt with insurance companies and the athletic association. All that for 8:00 p.m. on Friday as senior Paul Barnes and Junior Kirk Walker watched as the Stag fans went wild—football had come to Fairfield. Two weeks later we celebrated with the first Homecoming Weekend complete with floats, football game and the Young Rascals.

Scene III

The Quadrangle, Dec. 5, 1966

Nar: "Look around here—you see a few students walking back and forth between Regis, Campion, Gonzaga and Loyola and the Campus Center. It's just a regular Monday night, most students are studying with the regular routine firmly established. Yes that's what it looks like on the outside but appearances are deceptive. Watch—up there on Regis 2, the corridor that will win the intramural football championship being unbeaten and unscored upon."

1st Junior: (Looking out the window.) "Hey it's starting to snow—hey it's the first snow of the year."

Roommate: "Dirk will you shut up, I've got a lab tomorrow."

1st: (At doorway) "Hey everyone out for a roll! It's the first snowfall!" (Shouts are coming from Campion. Seven interpid juniors from Regis 2 rush outside in pj's, hats and bathrobes. They join hands. They dance around the tree. Students come out from Campion and do likewise. Stags line Regis' stairway. "Come on our Freshmen!!!") Regis empties of students. Campion and Gonzaga do likewise. Loyola hesitates then floods out. Now a huge circle that touches all dorms in the quad. Now the chant "Beat B.C. BEAT B.C." Now singing Christmas carols. More dancing. Now and then a rush to the center by the old tree and stump. More and more students. More and more snow. BEAT B.C. BEAT B.C. The wild enthusiasm begins to subside a bit. We're cold, We're worn out, We're hoarse. The crowd begins to break up when suddenly someone shouts "Storm the Big House" Everyone looks up the slope to see Bellarmine looming through the falling snow looking like some great Wuthering Heights. Students start the dash up the long slope. Mr. Foy steps out in front of the runners from Gonzaga. He is left behind, hopelessly trying to get order. "Steal their cattle" "Rope their Women" (in the Jesuit residence hall?) "Hell, rope their cattle." "Give us bread" "How about wine" Will the lead runners stop at the doorway? The crowd stops and gathers its breath. Pont Pant. A song rises—"Silent Night, Holy Night . . ." On the topmost window on the right side a light goes on. A figure is outlined like a cameo. He draws on his cigarette and flicks it away. It hits the building shedding short-lived sparks. It falls in the snow at the base of the building. It's over. We turn, we walk back. It's over. It's the best. The best outpouring of enthusiasm ever seen at Fairfield. And the Juniors started it. Back in Regis 2 the instigators sit in their usual meeting room. The man that started the whole thing goes to the Window, flings it open and shouts, "RALLY, SCENE I, EVERYONE OUTSIDE FOR A RETAKE!" You laugh so hard you cry. No rally will ever be like that one.

Nar: "Just an ordinary routine Monday night. It was unfortunate that Administration officials felt unsympathetically toward this outburst and forbade the authorized rally for the B.C. game that was to take place Tuesday night. A protest rally then ensued in which the Administration was informed that it could not act summarily and not expect student reaction."

Scene IV

Nar: "It was in '66 and '67 that the Viet Nam was escalated. As the war went so went the peace and resistance movement. Fairfield was no stranger to this issue and multiple methods were employed to investigate the multiple complexities. In September the United Nations Ambassador from Vietnam, M. Nguyen Duy-Lien conducted a lecture and question and answer period. Dr. Robert Cook, a professor at Yale gave another lecture stating his opposition to the war. The faculty devoted one of its forums to the issue. Several students and professors went on a three-day fast that coincided with the Lunar New Year Truce and the first three days of Lent. Several students who did not appreciate the anti-war sentiment of the universities conducted a petition signing campaign in support of the war. In sophomore year a similar petition was signed by over nine hundred students. In junior year a little over two hundred signed it. A controversial peace vigil was held opposite Gonzaga Hall and was matched by a counter demonstration."

Scene V

Place: The Campus Center Oak Room

Time: Any Time.

1st Junior: "Look there's Mrs. Thomson hanging more pictures. Every week there's another art exhibit in here."

2nd Junior: "That's the school for you. They're trying to get the community to regard F.U. as the cultural center for Fairfield County. Look at all the stuff we've had here to increase 'our couth'. We've had Sidney Hook's lecture on civil rights, Fredrick Shrady's sculpture show . . .

1st: "Where are you St. Anne?"

2nd: ". . . the exhibition and lectures on American humor, the Art and Photography show from Famous Artists in Westport, the concert of electrical music, Norman Dacy's lecture on "How to Avoid Probate."

1st: "Don't forget the A.I.D. director Wm. Gould, William Arrowsmith, Isaac Asimov, and the Monteverdi Festival coming in May."

2nd: "I wonder if the Cardinal Key Society is going to have those bus trips next year. That one to Lincoln Center for "The Alchemist" was great."

1st: "They had one to the Hartford Symphony too, didn't they? And that one St. Patrick's Day for "War and Peace."

1st: "Szabo won the "Golden Cup Award" for their coffee."

2nd: "They deserve it—They gilded my stomach."

2nd: "What difference will the student opinion make. You know nobody is going to listen to it. And besides an all male school is great, you can't beat it."

1st: "I suppose you think that we're pretty close to perfect huh?"

2nd: "Heck no."

1st: "You think we've got a good social atmosphere here?"

2nd: "I'm not saying I've got the greatest social life. But I have met a couple of really great girls down at the Huddle. Man could they drink. Real fish. But great. They were so great every guy at the bar bought them a beer. Man could they chug. It was great. All of us were so drunk. You can really get to know someone well at a Bar."

1st: "It certainly seems like you've really build some fine bridges across the communication gap."

2nd: "Besides, how can a school that wipes out its own literary magazine go in for something that big. We would have to be called the Stags and the Does, we would have to build'em a dorm and then we wouldn't get the field house for a generation. Nope too many problems. Too many angles."

Nar: "The outcome of the co-education issue was never settled. The students rejected it by 2 to 1. The faculty approved it unanimously. The trustees voted for co-ordinate school on our property. The class of 1968 would never see a co'ed at Fairfield."

Scene VI

Place: Bridgeport

Nar: "In '66 and '67 the civil rights movement and the realization of the plight of the ghettos had made an impression on many at the University and, through the work of a few individuals, notably Ron Bianchi and Bill Coffin '68, the Fairfield University Community Action Program was instituted. This held many activities anyone of which was suitable to an individuals preference. Some worked as big brothers and showed young boys their University, and the life that education opens to those who enjoy its priveleges. Some tutored children who were not doing well in school. Or helped the emotionally disturbed, the retarded child or the juvenile delinquent."

Nar: "(Junior year saw the formation and activation of a new society, the first social fraternity at Fairfield, Phi Kappa Theta. Its members conducted a Medicare Alert Program in Bridgeport, drives for the March of Dimes and the American Cancer society. The fraternity is a valuable organization for it balances activity between dorm students and commuter students. All too often these groups act as separate entities within a class. This split was felt in the class of '68. Several attempts to reconcile the two groups did not succeed."

Scene VII

Setting: The Playhouse.

This theatre was entirely converted by the efforts of students and by the enthusiasm of the director, Robert G. Emerich. Over the years it has been well known in the area that the plays produced here are of extraordinarily high quality. In the spring of Junior year the players and the director achieved the recognition so well deserved. The production was "The Road of the Greasepaint, The Smell of the Crowd." Immediately after it opened it was subjected to standing-room only crowds, extra performances and rave reviews. The stars, senior Bob Mann and junior Vin Curcio, were overwhelmed when Cyril Ritchard, who starred in the same production on Broadway took time off from the Shakespeare festival in Stratford to visit the playhouse and compliment the actors on their lively performance.

Scene VIII

Setting: The Bridgeport Motor Inn

Time: Dogwood Weekend

Occasion: Trouble.

She: "Gee what a great weekend, in spite of the rain."

He: "Bill Coffin and Bob McCann sure did a great job. That concert, Renaissance of Rock with the Chiffons, the Duprees, and Anthony and the Imperials was fantastic. But I didn't think that sermon at mid-night mass on motel morality was called for."

She: "Er, well no, I guess not."

He: "Boy my eyes hurt. Do you mind if I turn off the light?"
(Click)

She: "You don't have to turn off all of them!"

(Click) (Click)

She: "That was really nice at the prom when they announced the couples who had gotten pinned."

He: "Sure was too bad it rained."

She: "My roommate got engaged you know. She's so happy."

He: "The picnic was a lot of fun."

(Extended silence.)

He: (finally) "Ahhhhh"

She: "If you don't stop that in the next couple of hours, you can just go back to school."

(Some more silence)

She: "Ahhhhh. Say, we've been going out for a long time, haven't we."

He: "Sure have, every since fourth grade."

She: "Isn't it odd that other couples that have gone out less than we have are getting engaged?"

He: "So what?"

She: "Well I just think it's time we started making plans about our future, like what's going to happen to us next year when we graduate . . . Where are you going? . . ."

He: "Well, er, ah, I forgot to sign in better get back to school, see you tomorrow. . . ."

(SLAM)

ACT IV

Scene I

Setting: Campus Center Cafe

1st Senior: "Seems funny to be finally seniors now, you know, to be finally in charge of the activities. Seniors are captains of the teams, Mike Bocchini is Student Government President, Paul Greeley's in charge of the MANOR . . ."

2nd: Jack Cronan of the CKS, Carl Chadburn's running the Glee Club, Paul Hughes with THE STAG.

1st: "It's the oddest feeling not knowing everyone now. Who knows a freshman except for the Senior Prefects."

2nd: "How about the three in a room in Loyola? Just like we had in freshmen year. That's brutal. But they did liberalize the rules."

3rd: "Whole lot of good that does us."

1st: "They have great rules at Lantern Point. Almost no supervision."

2nd: "They might as well give all seniors no rules. What does a senior care about now."

1st: "Drinking, draft and dates. But not in that order."

2nd: "Well I've got to go and cut classes. What time you going down tonight?"

1st: "The Center or Your Brothers Suspenders?"

2nd: "How about Suspenders. Get a chance to see the Lantern Point crew."

Setting: By the beach at Your Brother's Suspenders'

Nar: "This bar is the off campus home for Seniors. The dorm students come down here to meet and drink with those seniors who have moved off campus for their last year. There's a sizable colony of seniors at Lantern Point and houses along Reef Road. Inside seniors crowd the bar, the tables, the pool table. For in senior year the realization struck that it was time for moving on, our time was drawing to a close."

1st: "I never thought I'd be out drinking with two tests tomorrow. I've cut more classes than I've made this year."

2nd: "Know what you mean. But who can concentrate. The only time I spend at my desk is typing out those forms for grad school, the Peace Corps or Vista."

1st: "Pretty optimistic about getting out of the draft aren't you?"

2nd: "What can you do? You can't just think about it all the time."

3rd: "You hear all the Jersey guys got reclassified 1-A."

2nd: "Whoa, are they out to get them."

1st: "I can see it all now. At graduation we walk up, shake hands with McInnes, pick up our diploma, our fatigues and rifle and walk off onto trucks for Dix."

3rd: "It might be a lot of fun to have a reunion next year in Da Nang or Saigon."

1st: "You have to look at the positive side of it. We're going to get an opportunity to serve our country, to put to use all our theology, philosophy and art courses, to learn new skills—markmanship, bayonet drills, killing and maiming."

2nd: "I was out last week campaigning for McCarthy. All these people looked at me like "Now it's your turn, college punk."

1st: "It's a good feeling to be finally apathetic, you know. For three years I've waited to be a senior so I can relax. So finally I've gotten rid of all my extra-curricular activities and responsibilities. Now I only have to think about the draft."

2nd: "What do you think of these reserve programs."

1st: "There all the same deal, one maybe a little better than another but it still takes a couple of years anyway you cut it."

2nd: "I wonder if the Army has three in a room."

3rd: "Or a Zoo Corridor."

1st: "Or Mass three times a week and mass checks."

3rd: "Remember hitchhiking to Port Chester for those drinking bouts freshman year, and guys barfing on the corridor."

2nd: "The test of a true gentleman: 'Should I clean it now or leave it till Monday.'"

3rd: "Remember on Gonzaga 2 in sophomore year, the case of the Phantom Barfer. And the Committee of his arrest and dentention."

3rd: "I was on Campion 2 when the C-Men swept the intramurals. What a crew that was!"

1st: "Remember your roommate freshman year, he never went to the movie after the first week because the signs read: 'Movie tonight—Gonzaga'. He thought we were showing 'Gonzaga' ever week."

2nd: "Every movie guaranteed to have three breakdowns and a blow out every show."

4th: (after returning from the pool table): "You know what we should have again? Fr. Nickerson lecturing on the Beatles' 'A Hard Day's Night.'"

1st: "You had Davis didn't you? How about that History-A-GO-GO before the final."

4th: "What a time that was!—Bucephalus, Gambrinus"

1st: "Yeah, the inventor of beer! Another round on Gambrinus!"

Nar: Even at this late point the class retained its friendliness. The class had never been very 'clicky'. One was constantly expanding his circle of friends. The doubt and confusion about post-graduation lives gave all a common meeting ground—fear.

1st: "Well what are you going to do next year?"

2nd: "I'll be going to Viking Graduate School, taking courses in rape and looting." Actually I think Vietnam will be over by tomorrow morning and the Selective Service System will remove all inequalities. And we will be able to lead our lives as free and decent Americans."

1st: "Eat' a heart out, baby."

3rd: "Know what an optimistic senior is?"

2nd: "What?"

3rd: "A senior who buys new clothes to wear for his physical . . . ha, ha . . . . . Whatch'a crying for? I say something wrong."

Nar: "Senior year was filled with the now routine events. The Fifth Dimension concert marked Homecoming Weekend. As did a student protest over regulations for that weekend. Andrew Heath the music director and professor for the senior music course gave a memorial concert. The Student Government sponsored a Beach Boys concert. The class had always been interested in being better than other classes. With the opportunity to break the record of most money lost on a social weekend, John Tabellione and Tony Labesky were not found incapable of the task. The spectre of Vietnam achieved greater clarity by the news of the death of Joe Zale who left our class at the end of Freshman year. Out last spring at Fairfield brought Dogwood Weekend featuring an American Music Festival with Dave Brubeck, Aaron Copland, and Richard Rogers. Art exhibits, lectures, classes and books went on but somehow we had seen it all before. They did not hold the fascination that we felt in earlier years. But as we started to fade out of active involvement, we noticed that the spirit of innovation would be leaving with us. A group of faculty and students felt that the core curriculum was too limited for the 1960's. They instituted the Free University in which profs and students gave classes on particularly interesting topics. A Jazz Movement was organized and its concerts were highly successful. Another group started a Judo and Karate Club. Ned Coll, a Fairfield graduate '62, had organized the Revitalization Corps to help with the problems of the poverty areas of the cities. A chapter was organized and students participated with trips to Harlem. For the most part, seniors had little to do with these activities. Our interests were now directed to our future careers, problems of graduate school, military service, and marriage. For this the underclassmen labeled us apathetic. We remembered, ironically, that as underclassmen, we too had labeled the seniors apathetic. It seemed that now the fates were in control and things had been like this before and would always be so. We celebrated our coming graduation with a 100 Nights Party, a century of 24 hour fragments till June 9, 1968. We looked around and joked and laughed and tried to forget that shortly we would have to say good-bye. We had to drink and sing to forget that it was over. "For one brief shining moment that was known as . . . ." Fairfield. For four years our identity was associated with that name. Wherever we went, whatever paths our lives would divergently take, we would remember Fairfield. Fairfield. Fairfield. The names, the faces, the spectrum of emotion and experiences, the loves, the hates, the excitement, the boredom, the singing for joy and the crying in pain, the realization that it all must pass from the realm of reality to the images of the memory saddened us. We should be joyful. We should be, we told ourselves. Then why weren't we. And now to travel the rivers of the mind, to recall and reminisce.

We celebrated the end of our four years with a Senior Week. At the cocktail party, the surf party, the formal prom, at the class day and at the dance with the parents we recalled just how far we had come, how much had grown, how much change had already taken place in our lives and how much more we had to face. It was indeed a long time coming. Our days as a class were over. Our value and the value of Fairfield University would now be measured by the value of the individuals of the Class of 1968.

At long last! The finished product! For me, the 1968 MANOR has been a year of happiness, anxiety and a tremendous amount of pride. It has been the members of the staff who gave so much of themselves to help portray a pictorial essay of Fairfield—1968.

Among them let me thank:

—Fr. George Gallarelli, S.J., our moderator, for his constant trust and confidence in our staff.

—John O'Keefe, the real mainstay of our staff. 'Rip' never faltered when the going got tough.

—Bill Hempfling and Nello Trevisan, for the amazing job they did in portraying Campus Life.

—Tony Labesky and Larry Cirina, for their new insights into the sports world of Fairfield.

—Jack Cronan, for putting together a great faculty section and still managing to make the Dean's List.

—Tim McManus, for the time and effort he put in to getting as many different seniors as he could into the senior section.

—Byron Collins and Dick Downey for saying with words what we had portrayed in pictures.

—Jim Reme, Bill D'Alessandro and Paul Chenet for their excellent photography.

—Barry Smolko and Jim Dirksen, for all the time and effort they put into the successful selling of advertising.

—John Stocks, for the many hours he spent sitting in the lobby of the Campus Center trying to persuade people to 'Be a Good Guy and Buy a Yearbook'.

—John O'Connor, Fairfield University's Ace Photographer, for his pictures and professional suggestions.

—Jim Findley, our representative from the publisher, without whose help there would be no 1968 MANOR.

To these and the countless others who gave of their time and talents, what more can I say in addition to a sincere "Thank You". You have made the entire enterprise extremely worthwhile and enjoyable.

To our staff, to our patrons, to our friends, to all who view the fruits of our work, may you share the pride and pleasure with which we present this, the 1968 MANOR to you.

Respectfully,
Paul J. Greeley, Jr.
Editor-in-chief
